SUNDAY MORNING CHATS

My "Chats" this fine Sunday morning are going to be more about Sacramento than Richmond as that is where I have been part of the week, except to suggest to the people of Richmond that they follow the very good example set by the people of the capital city by planting trees. Oh, the trees there! Miles and miles of great, big, beautiful trees, lining the streets and walks, and giving the city that Garden of Eden look which nothing else on earth can. Those of you who would have your homes and your city marvellously beautiful, plant trees, and do it now.

There is little of interest on the trip between here and Sacramento, as at this season of the year the hills are not only barren but bare and brown and discouraged-looking. I noticed a flock of geese eating the posters off a billboard, and their mild eyes seemed to say that the hills on the west side of the Straights would not even keep a flock of Irish hunger strikers alive. The posters were about real estate, for sale by a fellow named Din-kiepiet, who lives at Suisun, and likely it was the name that tasted good to the geese—it has a sort of old-fashioned lager beer free lunch sound.

I noticed at every village we passed through that it had a struggling and weedy cemetery on the outskirts, intimating that wherever one goes the dead ones and live ones are about fifty-fifty. It is that way everywhere. What a razzle-dazzle there will be when the final horn is blown and there shall be judged "the quick and the dead." Let us all remain "quick" as long as possible, for it will be a long wait.

An hour after I struck Sacramento there was a million dollar fire lit up the river and the trees and the sky like a brilliant sunset, but honest to goodness I did not set it going! I can prove an alibi by McClatchy of the Bee, Allen, Milne and Waterhouse of the Union and Friend W. Richardson, state treasurer, with whom I was trailing around. I did not set anything at all on fire—doggone it, I had my wife with me and couldn't.

Chas. K. McClatchy, the elder, is now traveling in Canada, and the sons are piling up the money in the live of the Dally Bee in large gobs, as winter is coming and the H. C. L. is with us always. He is on what the Canadian Pacific calls its "Tour de Lux," for which they charge double price on account of the name. In this country we call it De Lux but in French it is De Luxe, but the price is the same in either event. He wrote back that at a hotel in Quebec he was charged 60 cents for one ear of sweet corn, and at the same time I was eating one at the Hotel Land in Sacramento for 10 cents that drizzled the juice clean down to my elbows and stretched my rosy and dimpled mouth an octave. Whenever I see that word De Lux I always walk around on the other block.

The Union is the big morning paper at Sacramento and they appeared to be making so much money they didn't have time to count it—just shoveled it on the hay scales and weighed it by the ton. Editors Allen and Waterhouse were so busy their hair didn't look like it had been combed for a month. When I have a few days to loaf, it is such a rarity, it tickles me nearly to death to see the other slaves work. I divided my time between the movie picture shows and watching those fellows work, and thus had a most enjoyable time.

Friday morning I had a very severe nervous shock and came near collapsing with heart failure.

I was in the state capitol building, having a long chat with Friend Richardson, the State Treasurer, and he took me into a big vault and showed me the money. He asked me if I was interested in money, and I told him no—what the dickens use has a newspaper man got being interested in any such thing as money? But just for exercise, I helped him stack up about a hundred bundles of bills, each bundle containing $30,000, several millions in all, and when we got to the trays of $20 gold pieces, by the dozens and scores of trays he had to telephone to a drug store for aromatic spirits of pneumonia, having no other kind of spirits handy. I never could stand shell and other shocks. Every fellow around there had a gun on his desk big enough for a burro to crawl into, but they assured me that this was not open season on editors. Confidentially, between you and I, I don't believe Friend Richardson would shoot a rabbit. He is even too mild of manner and kind of humor to shoot craps.

I asked Richardson how the public there liked the editors of the papers, and he said real well, except that Waterhouse would persist in writing poetry in spite of everything that could be done, and he supposed it was just one of those public afflictions that had to be put up with.

And here I am, almost at the bottom of these Sunday chats, and no text dug up yet for the Sunday sermon. Therefore I will find it in a Sacramento audience of a picture show, and it is a good one, and one we should all take to heart. The play was "Humoresque," and you should go and see it the first chance that offers, for it is good. It starts in the Ghetto section of New York, where there are no end of object lessons and heart thrills. I have been through there many times, and one always needs a bath afterward, though full of food for thought. I generally took two—one externally and one internally. The story is based upon love and the ties of home, and the point I wish to make is that if you take love and the ties of home out of your life you have nothing left but a shell and as barren a waste as the Marin and Solano hills are right now. The Sacramento people would laugh a little and then covertly take out their handkerchiefs and mop up the tears that trickled down their honest faces, and I ducked down in the seat and wished I had brought along a pocket full of blotting papers for my own use.

Without those home environments and the love that cements them into a glorious whole, this life is a chaos and all of us would be running unbranded on the ranges of the devil.

The father, the mother, the little child, the fire-side and the love that weaves around and through it all—that is all there is for our short stay here. The rest is written in the sand, and the winds of fate blow it hither and yon.

In the play a little girl is so hungry for love that she fishes a dead cat out of a garbage can and tries to warm it back to life. We, too, moisten the sod with our tears and strew flowers upon the graves of the dead, yet are stingy with our love for the living. Love begets love, and if you would reap your share you must also sow the seed.

Do not lock up your heart in cold storage! Open it as a book to the members of your family to your friends and neighbors, and to all mankind, and life will be brighter, the earth better, and your brothers and sisters of life's journey can then find a better outlet for their heart throbs than in an endeavor to wain back into life dead cats, dead hopes, dead ambitions, dead sentiments of love and godliness!

FOOD VALUE OF MILK EXPLAINED

An interesting lecture was given at the Washington school Friday afternoon on the food value of milk, by Miss Rickoff of Berkeley. Miss Rickoff is well known about the bay in her connection with the Associated Dairymen of California and she has appeared before large audiences, handling with equal success both the economic and the nutritive value of the dairy products.

Her lecture to the children gave them a distinct idea of the necessity of the milk, as well as butter, eggs and cheese in the diet, and she emphasized the fact that without a certain growth giving element in the butter fat of the milk, children could never grow in health, stature and strength like they should. She also spoke of the dangers of butter substitutes, as totally lacking in the food values and stated that the vegetable oils in the products called nucoa, could in no sense take the place of butter, but that children thus fed were virtually starving for nourishment.

The lecture was illustrated with stereopticon slides, but she promised next time to give them a real picture show with a film which has been sent to Los Angeles preparatory to the series of lectures she is to give on the dairies and pasteurization throughout the south during October.

Telephone Company Will Keep Installation Money

An order issued yesterday by the State Railroad Commission gives the Telephone and Telegraph Company and other telephone companies operating in the state, authority to retain funds collected from subscribers for installation and extension charges. It has been the custom prior to the taking over of the lines by the government to return the installation charges amounting to $3.50 to the subscriber after a year's use of the phone. This custom was set aside by federal authorities but it was re-established when the lines again came under the jurisdiction of the commission. Recently the companies asked the commission for a modification of its order governing the practice. In Company and other telephone companies operating in the state, authority to retain funds collected from subscribers for installation and extension charges. August 1, 1919, and August 1, 1920 must be returned, but that charges collected after August 1, 1920, may be retained by the company. The charge for installing extensions has been fixed at $1.50 by the commission's order which also provides for $1.50 charge for each station or private exchange service after the initial installation charge of $3.50.

One Hundred and Fifty of Freshman Girls Have Party

About one hundred and fifty freshman girls of the high school and their mothers gathered at the high school auditorium yesterday and held a party among themselves, and it was a real big success. The first part of the afternoon was taken up by the rendition of a very interesting program, after which the girls and their guests repaired to the gym where refreshments were served, and then a number of toasts were given. Miss Geraldine Rock acted as toastmaster. Dancing then took up the remainder of the time. The program given was as follows: Song and Indian dance by Mary Mattanovich. Fashion show by Nell McGrew, Anna Thompson, Marjorie Donnerwirth, Aileen Studebaker, Davilla Theis, Mary Renfree, Irene Grandberg, Mae Ekenberg, Catherine Hayes, Ruby Vance and Inez Stubbelfield. Dialogue "Sound and Theory," by Mary Jatta and Dolly Colclough. Recitation by Helen Carpenter. Song by Dolly Colclough. Playlet "We dine at seven," with the following characters: Julia, Helen Follett; Millicent, Alice Mahoney. Song, "Old Maids of Lee," by the 2-9 girls. Song and dance, "Freckles," by Virginia Campbell, Alice Mahoney, Davilla Theis, and Isabel Mino. Spring dance by Mary Mattanovich.

MOTOR BUS QUESTION IS ARGUED

of Richmond and by T. H. DeLap, Delancey Smith and W. H. Sauer for the motor company.

It was argued by Pierce and Carlson for the street car company that the original order issued by the commission simply intended that the motor company was permitted to pick up passengers at Twenty-third and Macdonald only, and that a revolving permit was not granted at all. To allow the motor company to come into the heart of the city and pick up the cream of the business, and not compensate the street car company for the heavy losses it is sustaining by the operation of the cross town lines would not be fair.

The attorneys for the motor company asserted the order of the commission read from Oakland to Richmond and meant just what it said. People had invested money in the concern on the strength of the permit and they did not believe it would be fair to place a different construction on it now, especially after the company had invested over $84,000 in buses.

It would appear that no matter what the decision of the railroad commission is that the matter will go into the courts, and develop into a long drawn out affair.

CARLSON TELLS HARBOR FACTS

oped adjacent to the harbor taking care of the bond taxes and redemption fund and said that because of increasing values, decreased taxes would probably result from building the harbor. He said the acreage gained by the city would be worth the $550,000 to be voted.

He spoke of how the pioneers of San Francisco had filled the land from Montgomery street to deep water and built a great city, and said, "We are all pioneers of Richmond, and will do the same here. He said that he, even, could remember when Seattle looked "no bigger than Richmond," and that developing its harbor had made it a great city.

"A few years hence we will walk the busy wharves of our harbor," the speaker said, "and we will look on big buildings in Washington avenue and Macdonald avenue and we will pat ourselves on the back because we voted the bonds."

Judge Hall made one of his usually snappy speeches, full of good points and devoted much of his address to explaining the project, every detail of which he has at his finger tips.

"The only fear is the too great confidence everybody has that the bonds will win," the city attorney said. "Every citizen, to make the harbor bonds absolutely safe, must get out and vote and see that his neighbors and friends do the same thing. You must remember that the vote of one citizen will defeat the votes of two progressive citizens."

"Keep the harbor bonds on your mind. Talk and work for them and above all go and vote for them."

Make it your first duty Tuesday to vote the harbor bonds.

order was wired to Secretary Wallace of the Chamber of Commerce and he is much pleased as he has been working hard for the culmination of this project. County Convention Endeavors is Being Held At Pittsburg

Between 300 and 400 delegates from Christian Endeavor societies were at Pittsburg yesterday for a convention of that organization. Upstairs and Down And Vaudeville at The Theatre Today

Besides a new feature starring Olive Thomas in the big success "Upstairs and Down," the T & D theatre will offer as a special bill tomorrow the special performance that attracted so much attention here four weeks ago. The return engagement is the result of repeated requests from interested patrons of the theatre, and the news that the management has secured them for another one-day run will doubtless be enthusiastically received.

All who saw the show when it was here a month ago, will remember the Kiddies presented by Blanche Hertz and will want to be sure and see them again. Their act will be followed by the more pretentious revue entitled "1920 Follies." This is a complete girl show with every thing that goes with it. Of course they will have many and varied costumes, brilliant ones, scant ones, and beautiful ones, just as they did before. And they will entertain with the sparkling repertoire of songs and dances which always delights an audience. It is reported that the big cabaret scene is even better than it was before.

"Upstairs and Down" is the screen version of one of the biggest successes of the legitimate stage of its time, and it is being played in by the girl whom both artists and critics everywhere considered the most beautiful girl in America.

The harbor bond election is Tuesday.

Heavy Loss By Collapse Wharf At Port Costa

A loss of approximately $25,000 was faced yesterday by Strauss & Co. when its grain and feed wharf collapsed into the bay, carrying with it 10,000 sacks of barley. It is believed that the wharf is a total loss. A crew of workers was gathered by the company immediately following the crash and an endeavor is now being made to salvage some of the barley. Strauss & Co. recently purchased the property from the George W. McNear Company of San Francisco. Officials of the company said the collapse of the wharf was due to the tere, a minute salt water bug, that has caused many similar collapses in the bay region.

Following the collapse other concerns began moving produce from their wharves. The Southern Pacific Company is seriously threatened, it was stated by engineers, who investigated the dock. Many other wharves had already been abandoned before the falling of that of Strauss & Company. The wharf of the grain company was 1000 feet in length. Its value was placed at about $50,000.

han looks why your teeth should be kept in perfect condition—your health. Without good teeth it's impossible to masticate your food properly and so digestion ensues and a long trail of troubles. We examine teeth without charge and do for them exactly what they need, and our prices for the requisite work are notable for their reasonableness.

BOILS And High Blood Pressure

Oakland, May 17, 1920
"From boyhood I have suffered from boils due to impure blood. My blood pressure was so high that for a long time I had severe headaches and my body was continually wet with excessive perspiration."

"After having been treated by many doctors, I finally found one who cut my boils open in a fruitless attempt to cure them. When he had cut me about twenty-five times, I quit. I then tried a milder remedy in the form of the FONG WANG CHINESE HERB TONIC. I took the herb tea faithfully for about three months, during which time my blood was thoroughly cleansed of ALL IMPURITIES. When my blood had become pure and rich, my boils automatically disappeared, and my blood pressure also became normal. I therefore no longer suffer from either headache or excess perspiration."

Proctor & Gamble Will Have Several Crack Ball Teams

When the Proctor & Gamble Company gets its plant in operation here some of the crack baseball teams of Richmond and other San Francisco Bay communities will have to protect their scalps.

One of the fads of this great corporation is baseball. It develops teams that can take a fall out of some of the best aggregations on the diamonds. Some famous players have come from the P. & G. teams of Ivorydale.

With something like 1000 employees to pick from, the baseball managers of the manufacturing corporation can develop a team here that will have enough speed to keep the local ones hustling. Some exciting games are expected.

The company also provides tennis courts to employees of both sexes and other forms of amusement. It is probable that it will purchase a suitable baseball field, when it is established here, as it will need all its waterfront site for plant and terminal development and it would not be a good location in which to place a baseball field.

Richmond can be a big city; why not make it one! Vote harbor bonds.

Early Morning Fire In Hunters Inn On Standard Ave.

A fire in the old Hunters Inn place on Standard avenue at the Point done about $25 damage yesterday morning at an early hour. The place is being conducted by Ralph Bias as a soft drink place. It is thought the fire was due to dropping a lighted cigarette in sawdust.

Leaders in labor, the pulpit, business and all walks of life, advocate voting the harbor bonds.

C. OF C. DUES ARE RAISED

There are far inadequate for a fair execution of the functions of this body, and whereas we have entered into a new era of assured activity important to the advancement of the civic interests of Richmond we have fixed upon a minimum membership of each business man of Richmond and environs at $5.00 per month after October 1, 1926; and every mercantile business of this city is urged to go as far towards an adequate monthly payment as possible, demonstrating his or their faith and allegiance to the civic interests of Richmond. Individual members will remain at $1.00 per month as heretofore prevailing.

Good Progress Is Being Made On County Highways

Good progress has been made during the past week on the pouring of concrete on the link of the highway between Martinsburg and Pacheco according to the weekly report furnished by County Engineer R. R. Arnold. Contractor Roland, who is doing the work, has poured concrete to the extent of crossing and with a large quantity of material available at Concord, the crew has been laying about 1000 feet each day. At this rate the second slab between here and Pacheco will be finished in about two weeks.

The work on the Giant stretch and the piece of road running up San Pablo canyon will be completed before the winter rains set in.
